According to the Chinese General Sun Tzu, "the best victory is winning without fighting", and that is the scene chosen by Eduardo Guerrero for his next show. The dancer focuses on his relationship with women – his mother, teachers, lovers, friends- at the boundary where sentimentality coexists with sensuality, overcoming both vital temperatures to find a bridge between the genders and sexes we usually refer to as persons. Guerrero is an allegory of his own conception of the world and of performance, in which the clear winner of this feat is flamenco dance." Juan José Téllez
