Los claveles

Zarzuela in one act by José Serrano with a libretto by Luis Fernando Sevilla and Anselmo Carreño

Around 1929, Madrid's musical scene was dominated by grand zarzuelas (three acts) and by variety shows. In this context, Los claveles was considered to be a tribute to the genre's past Golden Age, even though the characters, the language and atmosphere had been adapted to the trends of the times. In any case, the composer triumphed with a rich and rigorous score that contains noteworthy passages such as

"No me importa que no venga" and "Mujeres".

TLA will also perform, as a grand finale, Las coplas de don Hilarión, a selection of musical pieces from the zarzuela La verbena de la Paloma, with music by Tomás Breton and a libretto by Ricardo de la Vega. These pieces are part of the popular collective memory and include, amongst others, "Una morena y una rubia", the habanera "¿Dónde vas con mantón de Manila?" and the seguidilla "Por ser la Virgen de la Paloma"..
